

Name: Hinerangi Himiona

Ngāpuhi, Ngāti Toarangatira

A highly skilled and experienced project manager, researcher and facilitator. Her wide ranging networks span twenty years' of experience working with people in their communities, senior executives within iwi and central and local government. She has been an independent freelance contractor for over twenty years working mainly in the Maori cultural heritage and creative design projects. She has extensive experience working with archives, museums and libraries, research projects and land claims. She has an archives management qualification and studies Māori Law and Philosophy. She was a member of the organising committee for the inaugural International Indigenous Librarians' Conference in 1999.