Mununjali and Bundjalung groups

My family has provided me with a legacy of role-models that have demonstrated leadership and fearlessness, in facing obstacles. Who believe that through education and assisting each other we shall build a better Australia and to accomplish great things all that is needed is to have a dream and make it happen.

My dream is to provide equitable access to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander historical records held in Information institutions and open them digitally to remote Queenslanders, to remove the economically and geographically barriers to retrieving information.

To accomplish my direction, I have completed three tertiary courses in teaching, librarianship and recordkeeping, and spent two decades gaining experience on library client service systems.

I want to leave a legacy for Indigenous Librarians to follow in the library field and demonstrate changes that need to occur to the library system to open Indigenous library information for the future.
